

Researching a career or employment path

Name

Centre

To find out the career area or employment path that is going to suit you, you need to research information such as:

- what the career involves
- the qualifications you need to get into it
- how you train to do it
- what you have to be good at
- what you have to be like
- your ambitions
- your values
- what the long term prospects are

Then you can match what you find out to the things you are good at and are looking for in a job. However, you're unlikely something that exactly matches what you're looking. So action planning will help you to work out your long term goals and the steps you have to take (targets) to achieve them.

The career path that suits me best career path sources I used to find out about it development needs I have identified action I need to take to achieve them other people who could help me to achieve them by when	